The Vineyards

Early budding due to the hot days of April caused quite the alarm for all of the fruit industry. Our vineyard's location close to the river saved the buds once again. The warm air from the river stopped the early morning frost. But we are not out of danger yet, the last frost we had in 1992 was May 23rd and the river did save us that time also.

We now start the battle with weeds all the way to harvest. A wet year like 2009 puts quite the pressure on us because some weeds can grow a couple inches per night, and we have over 30 miles of the vineyard rows.
